WASHINGTON.

TUESDAY November 26, 1895. CROSBY S. NOYES Editor.

THE EVENING STAR has a regular and permanent Family Circulation much more than the combined circulation of the other Washington dailies. As a News and Advertising Medium it has no competitor.

Din order to avoid delays, on ne count of personal absence, letters to THE STAR should not be addressed to any individual connected with the office, but simply to THE STAR, or to the Editorial or Business Departments, according to tenor or purpose.

Remove the Desks. There would unquestionably be a good deal more real business transacted by the House of Representatives if the desks in the hall of the House were cleared out and that vast chamber reduced in size. It is to be doubted whether the framers of the Constitution contemplated that the lower branch of the national legislature would ever grow into the enormous proportions which it has now attained, and probably the House of half a century ago could reasonably be supplied with desks and such The halls of Congress have been populated from year to year, from session to session, with representatives of steadily increasing numbers, keeping pace with their constituencies. The mechanical surroundings of these legislators for the people have, however, remained the same, except that they have grown in mere size and numbers with the almost unprecedented increase of the population. Thus the present House is cumbersome, unwieldy and prodigally wasteful of time and effort. The debates in the hall are usually marked by scenes of great confusion that impede progress and that far too often culminate in disgraceful encounters. The deliberative character of the lower branch of Congress is being obliterated in its vastness and its intractability. The removal of the desks and the reduc tion of the hall itself, as proposed now, would at once destroy the chamber as a lounging place, or a reading, writing or smoking room, into which it has unfortunately been transformed in the course of years by such members as are not directly interested in the subject under current disnoise and the confusion and the smoke of their cigars clouds and poisons the atmos-They too often regard the council hall of the nation as a mere convenience for their comfort, regardless of the pressure of public business and indifferent to the peace of those who are endeavoring to perfom their legitimate duties as legislators.

It is true that the congressman has other duties pertaining to his office than those that require his presence in the hall of the House, but with the generous provision of clerks and the increasing facilities for individual accommodations that are provided there is little excuse for the present transfermation of the House into a vast office. The English house of commons has no desks, and with only benches for the accommodation of its members that body is capable of speed in the transaction of business such as is only possible here under the operation of iron-clad rules of procedure from the speaker's own committee in charge of the order of business. The good results that would flow from the proposed change would undoubtedly be an ample reward for those who now suggest it By all means let the parties bury the hatchet long enough to attend to this minor but important detail of legislative house-

A Dangerous Corner.

A correspondent whose communication to The Star was printed vesterday calls attention with reason and with force to the dangerous state of things that is caused by the corcentration of the rapid-transit carlines at the intersection of New York avenue and Fifteenth and G streets. This is undoubtedly the worst illustration of the transfer and junction nuisance in the city at once. Fifteenth street is too narrow to be so choked at this crowded point, and it of serious accidents at this bewildering correr. The plan of having the Mount Pleasant cars leave the avenue at Fourteenth street and travel thence directly northward to the end of that branch has been suggested and at one time it seemed likely to be adopted. It is a good plan, and with some medification of the scheme for the Metro politan tracks it would greatly relieve the situation. The case is bad enough and presents a sufficient complication to warrant study of the whole ground by the congressional District committees and the preparation of a measure of relief. Meanwhile the railroad company should assume some of the burden of responsibility to avoid accicents now resting on the people who are compelled to be on the alert at all seasons in defense of the rights that they are sup posed to enjoy without restriction. The transfer arrangement is cumbersome and dangerous, and there is no valid reason for its continuance. The system in vogue on the Ninth street line works satisfactorily and well and places a far heavier charge on the conductors than would be given to those on the avenue and Fourteenth street lines At all events, the various systems of giving transfers should be made uniform to avoid confusion, just as there should be immediately adopted and enforced a standard rule for the stopping of rapid-transit cars at street-cressings.

President Cleveland's turkey will weigh thirty-four pounds. It would be entertain ing and instructive to know whether he will have anything about a third term in his mind when he breaks the wish-bone.

Japan contemplates coming to this coun try for warships. Thus, step by step are removed any doubts that might have existed as to the practical, permanent quality of her civilization.

There are few things more fin de siecle than the prize-package method of locating

Twenty-five men worked half a day today on the city post office building.

Self-Answered Arguments. The District Commissioners should vigorously oppose the legal proceedings now perding which were instituted yesterday by the two steam railroad corporations whose tracks enter the city, seeking to restrain the enforcement of the order of October 26 compelling the steam trains to stop before crossing rapid-transit street-car lines. The agitation that will come from such a struggle as is likely to ensue in court will be one of the most effective means of keeping the grade-crossing problem alive and weil before the eyes of the people and the national legislators. The Commissioners should defend their order for its own sake, for it was framed in the interest of the citizens and for the protection of the lives of the patrons of the three largest street of the railroad corporations advanced in their application for an injunction are not so strong that they cannot be met, and when considered apart from the present case they demonstrate beyond question the absolute necessity for a speedy termination of the grade-crossing system. It is futile to urge that the steam trains should not be compelled to stop because they were in existence before the street-car lines were railroad lives in the city. The arguments

THE EVENING STAR. established. The main object of laws goverring communities is or should be the safety and best interests of the people, and it matters not which corporation had prior essession of the streets if the present situation is such that public security demands that one or both of them should be subject to some inconvenience. The complainants in the present case contend that the Commissioners' order would entail a loss of time, a delay of the mails and expense in the starting of heavy trains after they had been brought to a full stop. These things are the direct result of continued occupation of the streets at grade and the di-lemma that they apparently present would not exist if the tracks were elevated or de-pressed, as they should be without further delay. It would be curious indeed if the interstate commerce law could be effectively invoked to prevent municipal authorities from regulating in protection of the public safety the local terminals of roads that chance to pass through more than one jurisdiction.

The Naval Engineers.

The break-down of Chief Engineer Leach of the navy from overwork illustrates in a most forcible manner the need of a reorganization of the engineer corps to meet the requirements of the modern navy. Chief Melville has been asking for this relief for several seasons until it has become a standing plea. Yet Congress persists in regarding this necessary bureau in the same light as when the navy was composed in the main of sailing vessels, long before their almost complete displacement by the modern fighting machines. The naval engineer is today far more important than the sailor-man, for upon him depends the safety of the ship and its effectiveness in battle. Whereas the number of steam warships has increased in a wonderful ratio, the engineer corps has been decreased, thus throwing a most burdensome task upon these who remain on the active list, and causing such calamities as that which has just removed an efficient officer from the ranks. If the American navy is to take its rightful place among the maritime forces of the world this vitally important feature of its organization must be treated with a wise liberality by Congress.

Lord Salisbury's Reply. Lord Salisbury's tardy reply to Secretary Olney about the Venezuelan question will, in the ordinary course of events, get here a short time after Congress has convened. Coming at such a juncture, it is altogether probable that Congress will be eager to know its contents, after having been told by, Their conversation adds to the the President in his message of the progress the confusion and the smoke of of the negotiations leading up to the present situation. The houses will then be in position to deal with the matter as if a participant in the discussion from the beginning and to treat it as a current event which may be handled by Congress. Indeed, it would not be strange if the administration should find itself relieved of the great burden of the case by some radical expression of opinion by one or the other or per haps both of the houses, should it develop that Lord Salisbury has adopted a repellant attitude toward the American position

The glory of the Atlanta Exposition con tinues undimmed by the suppression of some of the Midway Plaisance features. It is a condition which testifies to the fact that it takes something more than medais and the "hoochy-koochy" dance to make up : great exposition.

Mr. Bryan of Nebraska has stated that if the democracy should declare for gold he would leave the party. It would be an impressive departure, but since the recent election Mr. Bryan would have some difficulty in posing as a pioneer immigrant.

Turkey seems to have developed a gov rnmental condition similar to that which has distinguished China, and the Sultan has no Li Hung Chang and John W. Fester to fall back on.

A great deal is constantly being printed about obscure persons who have fallen heir to immense fortunes abroad, but nothing about their signing receipts for the money.

Senator Chandler has long held the reputation of being readier with suggestions and some effective remedy should be applied for action than with balm for a compatriot's self-esteem.

> Spain is much worried for fear this coun try may not take sufficient pains to prevent irresponsible maritime gentlemen from handling fire arms.

> There is an abundance of explanation of the emigration of gold to Europe; but the gold continues to go just the same.

A Startling Discovery. "No, sir," said the Kentucky gentleman "I will not go out in this rain unless I can find an umbrella, sir." "You are very careful of yourself, for se robust a man.

"Yes, sir. I have had a fact brought to my attention which makes me far more cautious in such a matter than I used to be.
